

In the editorial section, Tim Jinks et al. (558) explain why a global response is needed to confront antimicrobial resistance. Melanie M Taylor et al. (559) present global estimates of the penicillin needed to prevent congenital syphilis.

Andréia Azevedo Soares (562–563) reports on the introduction of Wolbachia-infected mosquitoes in Brazil. Rabih El Chammay (564–565) tells Fiona Fleck how the Lebanese health system is improving access to mental health care services.

Poland

Asbestosis, mesothelioma and lung cancer

Beata Świątkowska et al. (599–604) report on efforts to provide care for people who worked in asbestos-processing plants.

Botswana, Ethiopia, Kenya, Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Namibia, Rwanda, South Africa, Swaziland, United Republic of Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia & Zimbabwe

Tetanus deaths in young men

Shona Dalal et al. (613–621) summarize reports of tetanus deaths and argue for renewed attention to vaccinating adolescent and adult men.

Brazil

Taking services to the patients

Ana Roberta Pati Pascom et al. (626–630) evaluate the provision of peer-administered HIV tests.

Sri Lanka

Surviving pesticide poisoning

Fathima Shihana et al. (622–625) describe a bedside test used to recognize and manage methemoglobinemia.

Consulting with industry

David Stuckler et al. (566–573) analyse versions of WHO's sugars guidelines.

Diagnosing Zika infections

Rémi N Charrel et al. (574–584) summarize the information needed for diagnostic test development.

Using trauma care guidelines

Lacey LaGrone et al. (585–598) review the evidence for references to WHO's trauma guidelines.

What people report in surveys

Lisa G Johnston et al. (605–612) insist on the need to check HIV status.

Improving food quality

LM Neufeld et al. (631–632) call for more evidence to inform nutrition policies.